Crashes on Shop

SAIGON (UPI)—A South Vietnamese fighter-bomber doing acrobatics for Premier Nguyen Cao Ky and a Boy Scout jamboree crashed in a ball of fire into a heavily populated area here today.

Two Vietnamese were killed and 25 persons, including eight Americans, were injured.

The dead included the plane's two-man crew, two children and a civilian.

Live Mortar Removed From Soldier's Side

DA NANG, South Viet Nam (UPI)—A U.S. navy doctor and an explosives expert teamed up today to pull a live mortar round from the side of a Vietnamese soldier with their bare hands.

The successful operation was performed with the two men leaning over protective, waist-high sandbags placed around the table holding the patient.

The unidentified Vietnamese soldier was described as in "good shape" after the 25-minute emergency surgery at the Da Nang station hospital.

A foot-long, 60-mm. mortar round, fins still intact, had ripped through the soldier's left shoulder and buried itself deep in his ribcage during a battle earlier in the day against communist guerrillas.

Working over the barrier of sandbags, Navy Capt. Harry H. Dinsmore of Pukiafawney, Pa., and engineer 1.C. John J. Lyons of Ewa Beach, Hawaii, gingerly pulled the explosive projectile from the man's body.

An ordnance disposal team standing by safely disarmed the rocket.

The nose of the round was lodged barely a half-inch from a bone that probably would have detonated its nearly one pound of TNT.

"He will survive," Dinsmore said after the operation. Wiping the sweat from his brow he added, "I wished I were somewhere else."

Hurricane Rampage
Nears End

(Times News Services)

MIAMI, Fla.—Hurricane Inez, a Caribbean killer with perhaps 600 dead in her wake, stalled over Cuba's south coast today and gave signs she was nearing the end of her deadly rampage.

An estimate of 500 dead came from Haiti as Inez, badly weakened by her battle with Cuba's Sierra mountain range, came to a stop between the cities of Trinidad and Cape Cruz, with half her circulation over land.

The storm's top winds had dropped to just barely hurricane force, at 75 miles an hour and they were expected to decline even more as Inez drifts slowly northward across the island tonight.

Other known victims of the storm were in Guadeloupe and the Dominican Republic. Cuba thus far has reported only one dead.

Damage estimates totalled more than $100 million from Inez' five-day pounding of the Caribbean.

DIRECTED BY CASTRO

More than 150,000 persons were evacuated from low-lying river and coastal areas in Cuba—124,000 in Oriente Province alone—under personal direction of Premier Fidel Castro who flew to Santiago Wednesday.

Passage over the mountains of Haiti and eastern Cuba weakened Inez' force.

The closeness and uncertain path of the hurricane kept the two million residents of Florida jittery, although few made preparations for a big blow. The weather bureau warned south Florida and the western Bahamas to keep in close touch with advisories and small craft owners to stay in port.

Inez dealt a severe battering to eastern Cuba when it hit near Guantanamo Bay Friday with 128 MPH winds. Although its killer wind-punch had diminished today, the storm backed up Cuba's rivers with high tides and blanketed the eastern half of the island with flooding rains.

COFFEE CROP LOST

The guarded Communist radio reports reaching Florida admitted heavy damage to Cuba's all-important sugar crop. The island's coffee crop apparently was wiped out.

Havana Radio reported one death and 38 persons injured. Guantanamo City was hardest hit. About 500 houses were wrecked and 25,000 persons evacuated from the city. Sixty-one houses were knocked down in Santiago, and sugar warehouses near Caimanera were unroofed with their contents damaged.

Inez weakened its heaviest destruction, however, at Guadeloupe.

INDONESIA YOUTHS YELL

JAKARTA (UPI)—About 20,000 angry students massed outside Indonesia's Freedom Palace today, marking the first anniversary of the abortive Communist coup with a demand President Sukarno explain his role in the attempted Red takeover.

The students, shouting "Sukarno Peking dog," and guarded by four battalions of army troops and tanks, carried giant effigies of Sukarno wearing the Communist hammer and sickle emblem on his Moslem cap.

Sukarno was spending the weekend at his suburban palace in Bogor but hundreds of students set up a tent city outside the palace grounds to await his return Monday to make sure he knows of their demands.

RUSSIANS LEAVE

Walkout Slams
Peking Speech

PEKING (CP)—Soviet-bloc diplomats walked off the reviewing stand today in protest against a National Day speech by Chinese Defence Minister Lin Piao charging the Kremlin with plotting with the United States over Viet Nam.

Lin Piao told a cheering throng, estimated at upward of 3,000,000 people, that China will carry through to the end its struggle against Soviet "revisionism."

China also marked its 17th anniversary with a pledge to support Vietnamese warring against the United States and with a warning to the U.S. not to force China into war.

Lin Piao, speaking for Communist Party Chairman Mao Tse-tung and the party's central committee, told the throng:

"We are determined to support to the end the fight of the fraternal Vietnamese people in resisting America and saving their country, whatever sacrifice we have to make."

ECHOES EDITORIAL

He also echoed an editorial in the Peking People's Daily which warned the United States that if it dared to force China into war "several millions of bravely fighting liberation army troops... several tens of millions of militia and Red-Guards who are the fraternal rear of the liberation army" would be waiting.

The 59-year-old bespectacled minister, now the No. 2 man in the Chinese hierarchy, appeared with Mao and other leaders of the state and party who reviewed a parade in Peking's Gate of Heavenly Peace square.

About 5,000 goose-stepping soldiers, carrying sub-machine-guns in one hand and red booklets of the quotations and writings of Mao in the other, led the parade.

It was the first time since 1959 that troops had taken part in the Oct. 1 parade here.

After the troops came a solid mass of 1,000,000 Red-Guards—young shock troops of the current campaign against bourgeois tendencies—each waving the same booklet.

In the main speech of the day, Lin Piao declared: "Imperialism headed by the United States and modern revisionism, with the leadership of the Communist party of the Soviet Union at its centre, are colluding and actively plotting peace-talk swindles for the purpose of stamping out the raging flames of the Vietnamese people's national revolutionary war against U.S. aggression."

The only Communist diplomats to remain in their places after this remark were the Romanians, the North Koreans, and the North Vietnamese—"neutrals" in the Sino-Soviet ideological dispute—as well as the Yugoslavs, Cubans, and Albanians.

Clive McKee, director of talent and industrial relations for the CBC, said that the two parties also agreed to wait until the federal government announces its policy on premiums for bilingual staff and consider their applicability to the corporation.

TWO BODIES

Wave Sinks
Dredge,
10 Lost

QUEBEC (CP)—Police officials directed a search today for eight men still missing after a dredge sank near Quebec City Friday night.

Two bodies were recovered from the oil-slicked St. Lawrence River during the night.

Lawrence Monbourquette of L'Ardoise, N.S., and Real Parent of Tracy, Que., were drowned when the dredge Manseau 101 was swamped by a large wave and sank near the Quebec City bridge, about 10 miles west of the city.

Port authorities said 13 other members of the 23-man crew of the dredge, owned by Marine Industries Ltd., of Sorel, Que., were rescued either by the tug Rene Simard, which had been towing the dredge, or by other ships dispatched to the scene.

Survivors of the sinking said that they were swamped by a huge wave shortly after a large boat passed them while they were lowering large pylons the dredge uses to keep itself in place.

"The minute I saw this big ship coming toward us at full speed, I knew we were going to have it," said John Reid, 35, of Saint John, N.B., a winch man aboard the dredge.

"The ship passed about 300 feet from us and I knew there would be a strong stern wake."

Mr. Reid said he kept his post at the winch until he felt that the dredge would capsize.

"That ship—I couldn't see the name—passed us exactly like a Cadillac goes by a Volkswagen on a highway."

"From the time the water started to fill the dredge and from the time she started to list, there wasn't more than a minute or a minute and a half."

The 135-foot Manseau 101 sank at about 8:30 p.m. under clear conditions and strong westerly winds.

The dredge was put into position to begin work on construction of a second bridge parallel to the present Quebec City bridge.

'Cannot Respect
Injustice'—IWA

VANCOUVER (CP)—The annual International Woodworkers of America Convention today branded Friday's jailing of labor leaders as "vengeance rather than justice."

"We cannot respect injustice cloaked in any form," said a statement from the executive board and approved by the convention of the IWA, which with some 30,000 members is the province's most powerful union.

Jail sentences were given four labor leaders who were convicted of ignoring anti-picketing injunctions at the Lenkurt Electric Co. plant in neighboring Burnaby last May.

The four remained in jail. Tom Berger, defence counsel for the accused, said an appeal against the four prison terms will be launched immediately but this did not mean the men could get bail.

Bail could only be obtained if the appeal concerned the conviction, he said, adding it should be possible to get an appeal heard this month.

"We hold Lenkurt Electric Ltd. and the attorney-general Robert Bonser responsible for an attempt to subvert the law in order to suppress legitimate protests against obvious injustices," the IWA statement said.

"... We now will demand a political accounting for a tragic miscarriage of justice."

"We will not rest until the workers in this province are freed from the threat of ex-parte injunctions."

The statement followed reaction Friday night from Jack Moore, regional president of the IWA, who said:

"Although the law is not an ass, there are certainly a lot of asses involved in the law."

'Signal for Gigantic Campaign'

This is the signal for a "gigantic campaign to end once and for all the use of injunctions in labor disputes," said Ray Haynes, president of the British Columbia Federation of Labor.

Boos and some jeers were heard in the packed courtroom Friday after a Supreme Court judge handed down jail sentences to:

—Charles Patrick Neale, secretary of the Vancouver Labor Council, six months;

—Thomas Clarke, vice-president of the IWA's big Vancouver local, six months;

—Jeffrey James Power, president of the Marine Workers and Boilmakers union, three months;

—Art O'Keefe, former business agent for Local 213 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, four months.

In all, 22 were convicted of contempt of court. Three—all women—received suspended sentences; four were given the jail terms and the others were assessed fines up to $500.

Three days of demonstrations involving several hundred men broke out at the plant May 11, 12 and 13, following a wildcat strike by the IBEW local.

Some 257 IBEW members at the plant walked out protesting the company's overtime policy and what the union called dragging out of contract negotiations.

Mr. Justice James Macdonald, in handing out the jail terms and fines, said court orders in a democratic society must be obeyed or the eventual result will be decay.

Mr. Berger argued for suspended sentences, saying all the union men already had suffered as a result of their convictions—some unable to get work, some on welfare and others virtually blacklisted.

Convert to the Cause

THERE CAN BE NO DOUBT that Premier Bennett's visit to Ottawa a fortnight ago impressed him with the very real dangers that now threaten the economy of Canada and of this province. It is less clear that some of the precipitate steps he has announced to hold rapidly rising incomes more closely in line with prices will be successful.

It is several months since the federal government, recognizing the inflationary imbalance of our economy, urged provincial governments, among other large spenders, to postpone as much of their building programs as possible in order to ease the demand on manpower and the resultant high bidding for workers and materials.

The response was hesitant. There was general agreement in principle but few planners wanted to give up their projects: some were "urgent," all were "necessary," and some were so far advanced that abandonment was impossible. But now the call has been made more compelling, and Mr. Bennett—and it is hoped, many others—is seized with the need to exert control on the runaway boom. Failure to master the national trend will result in still further inflation, depreciation of the dollar, and a costly maladjustment of goods and spending power which could only be remedied with hardship to business, labor and many retired persons.

To reduce the demand for men and materials, therefore, British Columbia will curb its spending program. Highways, bridges, the museum building and other projects which can be postponed will have to wait for a year or more. Essential construction—and this must include schools, university facilities, hospitals, courts and other public buildings whose lack would quickly cause emergencies—will have to proceed. The cutback is not a matter of choice so much as necessity, and on a nationwide basis it could exert a significant effect on the economy.

Mr. Bennett's sudden ban on overtime for both private and public employees is less easy to assess. The objective, of course, is clear enough. But the many side effects of the removal of extra-hours wages could prove more troublesome than a continuation of the practice.

Government spokesmen admit that they have no estimate of the proportion of overtime pay in the total wage bill in this province. Hence it is difficult to say what anti-inflationary benefit will result from abolishing it. But the disruption of established patterns of industry may be the most notable result.

Already a Hydro Authority spokesman has announced that the vast construction jobs on the Peace and Columbia Rivers must proceed even if commitments necessitate overtime work. Managers of projects in isolated locations point out that it is the promise of getting a sizable stake from overtime pay that encourages men to go to such jobs—a fact implied in the Hydro statement. Large-scale renters of expensive equipment must use it to capacity if the deal is to be economical, and this may entail overtime work by operators. Many jobs are of a nature that cannot be broken off at whistle time, or are not on a large enough scale to permit hiring extra workers for part time.

Such factors present Mr. Bennett's overtime policy with problems which may defeat it. In any case, it appears that modifications will have to be made if the plan is to be workable.

What does emerge from this week's sudden flurry of anti-inflationary activity is the knowledge that Mr. Bennett has at last been converted to the federal government's policy of controlling the surging economy. Heretofore Mr. Bennett has widely proclaimed his adherence to a free-wheeling, free-spending program for a province whose economy had nowhere to go but up. Now, suddenly, he appreciates the dangers of such a course and takes steps to meet them.

In so doing, he has set a good example for the other nine provincial governments and for private industry as well. And on one point he is emphatic: if restraint is not exercised voluntarily, it will have to be enforced by government legislation—or by the hard laws of economics.

Indecision Remains

THE LATEST GALLUP POLL survey of how Canadians are inclined politically shows an increasing fragmentation of support for the two major parties, the Liberals and the Progressive Conservatives. The indication is that this country is still a long way from achieving the kind of consensus which could result in an end to minority government at Ottawa. The poll is published today on page 5.

It is worth noting that the survey was taken before the publication of Mr. Justice Spence's report on the Munsinger case, so that the figures given reflect the feelings of a representative group of Canadians on the everyday performance of the various parties, not on a relatively fleeting political by-play. Also notable is the fact that the number of persons who were uncertain how they would vote in an election declined from a record high of 40 per cent last July to 30 per cent. In other words, the attitudes of the voters hardened considerably in a two-month period.

The heaviest loss in voter support has been felt by the Liberals, not uncommon for the party in power but no comfort to them at a time when they face a difficult legislative program. The Conservative percentage is up by two points from July but it is still below the actual percentage of the popular vote achieved by the party at the last election.

The New Democratic Party, in fact, is the only one with a significant gain from its vote percentage in the election—up from 18 per cent to a record 21 per cent—and this could well be a manifestation of severe voter discontent with the old-line parties. In Ontario, in fact, the NDP is close to parity with the Liberals and Conservatives.

Results of a poll taken when there is no election immediately in sight cannot give a true indication of how people would actually vote; nor can percentage figures be translated into the number of seats any party would win in Parliament. But the figures are a base for a prediction that if the government were to be defeated in the coming session and an election called, the results would be at least as unsatisfactory and chaotic as the last time. This will be something for the leaders of all parties to ponder carefully.

Explosive Philosophy

IT IS A LITTLE LATE FOR half a dozen members of the so-called "heroic boring brigade" in a Chinese oil field to recognize the disadvantages of rejecting safety measures in their trade as "revisionist and bourgeois." An explosion removed them at once from their labors and the philosophic or ideological contemplation of safety.

But it is disturbing for outsiders to consider this Peking variant of "Russian roulette." If the attitude of the drillers is honored throughout Red China, a safety catch on the Chinese nuclear device might also be considered "revisionist and bourgeois."

FROM UNITED NATIONS, NEW YORK

U.S. Anger Provoked by French Viet Nam Plan

FRENCH-AMERICAN differences over Viet Nam have been brought into sharp focus here. They make Paris, even more than Moscow and Peking, a thorn in Washington's side.

France has become the principal non-Communist advocate of an unconditional withdrawal of American forces from Viet Nam. Her emphasis on American "responsibility" to make the first move, regardless of what the Communists do, strikes at the core of the American position, which is that each move to reduce the scale of warfare must be reciprocal.

The United States has proposed a halt in the bombing, to be followed by a general slow-down in the fighting and ultimately a troop withdrawal — provided that Hanoi will reciprocate at each step with corresponding gestures.

Until French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville spoke to the 113-nation UN General Assembly September 28, there was a considerable consensus that the next move was indeed up to Hanoi, as United States delegate Arthur J. Goldberg had repeatedly insisted it was.

By the time Couve de Murville had finished arguing for unilateral American action, however, much of the pressure on Hanoi for compensating reductions in its infiltration and terrorism had been lightened.

So long as there is hope of getting a new bombing pause, and perhaps even an American pull-out, for nothing, Hanoi is not likely to pay a price for it, diplomats pointed out. France had encouraged that hope.

Goldberg, obviously nettled, implied that France was being more Communist than the Kremlin. He indicated that the latest American position, which he put forward September 22, is being given "consideration and scrutiny" in Hanoi and Moscow. He said he "hoped" France would follow suit.

To tell the Reds, just as they were thinking of making a deal, not to strike a bargain, but to insist on a free American gift, was, Goldberg indicated, not the way to advance a Viet Nam peace settlement.

The French attitude is explained here in various ways. These are the principal theories:

1. That France, having herself been humiliated in Indo-China in the 1945-1954 period, would not be averse to seeing the United States also forced to withdraw in humiliating circumstances.

2. A more tolerant version of this theory is that Paris genuinely believes, as a result of her unhappy experience, that the American effort is futile and that Washington's most sensible course is to cut its losses.

3. That De Gaulle thinks the best attainable solution is one in which the two halves of Viet Nam — and eventually a reunited Viet Nam — are Communist but independent, spared from Chinese domination.

To this end, he is said to feel, North Viet Nam, which is currently Moscow-oriented, should be permitted to retain both troops and influence in the south, outweighing the National Liberation Front (Viet Cong), which is said to be Chinese-oriented.

The historic antipathy of North Vietnamese to Chinese would thus be harnessed, it is argued, to the end of containing Red China.

Whatever the factual and logical basis for this reasoning, it has the practical effect of focusing world attention more on the question of an unconditional troop withdrawal than on the/ unconditional halt in the bombing of North Viet Nam which UN Secretary-General U Thant has been urging.

Thant has proposed — as separate and presumably not interdependent steps — a bombing pause, a de-escalation, and a conference of all belligerents. Goldberg has proposed a bombing pause conditional on "assurances" of de-escalation, and then a conference, with Viet Cong participation to be arranged without serious difficulty.

Thant repeated Tuesday — despite a speech by North Vietnamese prime minister Pham Van Dong which was interpreted in Washington as tough — that the North Vietnamese still had "not rejected" his plan.

The implication was that if the United States would call off the bombers, it could have de-escalation and a conference even without the troop-withdrawal pledge that De Gaulle is promoting.

Offered these two presumed ways out of the war, Washington, it is said here, can pay its money and take its choice.

The trouble, as Goldberg sees it, is that in either case the United States will have to pay its money before it knows for sure what it is buying.

How Can a Government with Such a Record Be Trusted?

The Manchester Guardian Weekly

MR. Ian Smith announced a week ago that he believed the end of the dispute with Britain about Rhodesian independence was in sight. This was an astonishing statement. It was also alarming, because any settlement reached now must, short of a miracle, be on Rhodesian terms — terms which Mr. Smith can justify to the ruling party he was addressing.

Mr. Smith may, of course, have had devious motives for saying what he did. He may have been trying to split the Labour Party by playing on the support, understandable but misguided, which he enjoys in Britain. He may have been trying to hasten Zambia's exit from the Commonwealth, hoping that Britain would then say it had had enough of black men.

If his statement was to be taken at face value it could only mean that Mr. Wilson, through Mr. Bowden, the Commonwealth Secretary, had offered him terms which will perpetuate rule by the white minority. Such terms could not possibly be reconciled with the six principles Mr. Wilson has just reaffirmed. It can be assumed, therefore, either that Mr. Smith was playing politics or that he had misunderstood what Mr. Bowden has told him.

But supposing Mr. Smith had been offered terms which his party could accept, why would this be wrong? The question ought to be answered because there will now be people in Britain and Rhodesia who ask it. Is not Mr. Smith's rule at least as good as that of say General Mobutu or half a dozen other African leaders? We are prepared to see extreme measures taken against Mr. Smith and his supporters—sanctions, ostracism, even, if need be, military force. Ought we not at the same time to admit that the fruits of majority rule may well taste bitter?

To take Mr. Smith's case first. Five hundred thousand African immigrants, most of them from independent African States, prefer to earn their living in Rhodesia rather than vote for "the party" on an empty stomach at home. This may be unpatriotic of them, but they consider it realistic.

One objection to this argument is that the work exists in Rhodesia only because British colonial policy channelled investment there to meet the needs of the settlers. Another is that economic progress breeds further progress. But the most compelling answer is that the presence of work—and of men who have come to do it—is no excuse for denying people political and social advancement.

These are denied to Africans by the Smith regime. Many of its supporters have, indeed, told themselves that because economic opportunities for Africans are often better in Rhodesia than in neighbouring lands that is enough. It has been an excuse for not bothering about the Land Apportionment Act, the lack of higher education, the restrictions on free speech, and the difficulty for Africans in bringing themselves up to a standard where they can qualify for a vote. Equality of opportunity and of dignity are values that ought to be fostered for their own sake.

The nationalist parties in Rhodesia (the supporters of the Smith regime go on) have spent more time threatening each other's members and burning down their homes than in any more constructive activity. They have not vouchsafed any plans they may have for the future should British action bring them miraculously to power. The economy of the country depends on European skills and capital. These could be bought at a price, but as in Kenya (so the argument runs) no one in his senses would want to settle down or stay there, against a background of political abuse.

There is some truth in these arguments, though many riders ought to be added. In Africa, as elsewhere, politicians (saving a few great men like Nyerere, Kaunda, and the late Abubakar of Nigeria) do not always represent the best in their societies, and it is not for their sake that majority rule in Rhodesia is being sought.

The society of the ordinary African people is rich in its own characteristics—for instance, in its personal relationships and its optimistic humanist philosophy. The sense of collective responsibility within many African families, to take only one example, has much to commend it against the "get rich quick" philosophy common in the West.

But, white Rhodesians say, why not trust us to bring about African advancement at a fair pace? Precisely because when there is any prospect of Africans attaining equality or power that advancement will be halted. Mr. Smith himself is more enlightened than many of his followers, but he believes that there cannot and should not be African government in his lifetime. Not only that, but he has twice removed the entrenched protection for Africans in the Rhodesian Constitution—once after UDI, and now again by his current constitutional amendments.

How can a Government with such a record be trusted? And how can a dominant white minority, so concerned with maintaining its own position, be accepted as the guardian of African advancement?

In Rhodesia, as elsewhere, when African government emerges it will have the elements of arrogance, injustice, and ugliness. But if Britain were to retreat to the alternative, giving Mr. Smith what he wants, we would have entrenched inequality based on color. We should have done so in a territory neighboring South Africa's apartheid. And, thereby, we would have made certain that the chance of a full life, both collectively and for individuals, was denied to another four million people. It cannot be allowed to happen.

CATTLE ITS HOPE

A Grim Kind of Independence for Botswana

THE land that David Livingstone put on the map of Africa became the Republic of Botswana, instead of the British protectorate of Bechuanaland, yesterday — the newest and poorest member of the British Commonwealth.

Four times the size of Britain — most of it Kalahari Desert — with half a square mile of space for each of its half-million people, and only 4,000 whites in the whole territory, Botswana faces a grim kind of independence. It is a republic of the desert.

The problems of the new republic have not changed very much since the days when the pioneer missionaries Robert Moffat and his son-in-law Livingstone first met the Bamangwato and Bakwena tribesmen and wrestled to convert the wily old chief Sechele in the 1850s. Livingstone thought he would die of thirst as he tramped northwards to the Zambezi, and so have many tough travellers since his time.

A hundred years ago it was mission influence that prevented the Afrikaner-Boer farmers marching into the territory from the Transvaal. But today Afrikaner power extends its long arm into Botswana and yearly takes 30,000 of the best young men to work in South Africa. With no industries, few mineral resources, and an agriculture that is constantly threatened by drought and famine, Botswana is unable to hold her youth.

The new President is Seretse Khama — the 40-year-old descendant of the famous Bamangwato Chief Khama, and nephew of Tshekedi Khama who ruled the Bamangwato in the turbulent 1940s. Married to an ex-London girl Ruth Williams, Seretse Khama with his Oxford education is regarded as one of the wisest of the African rulers.

At his new capital of Gaborone, President Khama will preside over a miniature court east on presidential lines but with something of the old flavor of the Bechuanaland kgotla, or council, which would meet for long palavers in the shade of the trees and gradually provide the chief with the mind of the people.

For the Speaker of its Assembly Botswana is to have a Scottish medical missionary, Dr. Alfred Merriweather, who has spent many years at Botswana's best hospital at Molepolole. The mayor of Gaborone is to be another missionary, the Rev. Derek Jones.

As vice-president a quiet spoken school teacher has been chosen, Mr. Quett Masire. I talked with him recently and found him eager to establish an agricultural college in Botswana so that the basic industry of his country could be given a fresh and modern start.

As his permanent representative at the United Nations and Ambassador to Washington, President Khama has chosen a remarkable South African, Dr. Z.K. Matthews, one-time professor at Fort Hare College, and now Africa Secretary of the World Council of Churches in Geneva. A lawyer, one of the defendants in the famous "Treason Trial" during which he was detained for 135 days, Z. K. Matthews taught President Khama at Fort Hare College. Master and pupil now join together in serving Botswana.

Wedged between South Africa and the mighty Kalahari Desert, the new republic can never be fully self-supporting. Outwardly poor, it has a potential reservoir of wealth in its huge herds of cattle. If properly exploited it could add to the world's meat resources. It needs another abattoir and another canning factory. These are basic matters in Botswana, and matters which President Khama and his advisers are likely to pursue, whatever political complexion the country wears.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

For a restful and enjoyable half hour or so, go for a leisurely walk around the Centennial Trail at Francis Park.

Now the rain has come things have taken on fresh, bright, clean appearance.

The bracken is a drab brown in some places. In others it is still green, while in the low places the sword fern is still fresh and bright. On the rocky banks the little polypody ferns are breaking forth with their lighter green leaves.

The stonecrop has replenished its leaves and has taken on the bright sheen that is characteristic of this plant. The mosses are putting forth their spore capsules as well as new leaves. Mingled with them the dogtooth lichen are producing their fruiting bodies.

As you wander along, look up to the top of some of the balsam firs. See how the cone clusters are now beginning to break open, ready to cast their seeds. The cones only grow on the tops of this species of fir.

Stop by the little dam at the pool; see how the surface is completely covered by the duckweed so as to resemble a smooth, green table.

In the shaded forest area where the swamp is, you can see how the skunk cabbage leaves are now flattening out on the ground and being slowly broken up to provide food for another generation.

On the ground you will see many of the mottled green-brown slugs with eyes on the end of stalks. Do you know that this species of slug is the largest in the world?

Stop and examine some of the many spider webs that abound. See how wonderfully they are made.

NEWS FROM ISLAND POINTS

Church to Build Homes for Senior Citizens

DUNCAN — The district is to have a second non-profit village for senior citizens.

Latest will be a centennial project by the congregation of St. Peter's Anglican Church, Quamichan.

Members voted secretly in favour of the village project at their harvest supper meeting Friday night.

The village will be built at the north end of the church grounds, and have a maximum of ten double units.

Cost to the congregation will be $7,000 and Rev. Neil Robinson, rector, said it will be raised by $3.50 monthly contributions for a year from each family.

He said: "Work will go ahead as soon as the money is raised."

Balance of the total cost of $85,000 will be met by a 33-1-3 government grant, and a 56-2-3 loan from Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. The latter will be repayable over 50 years.

Mr. Robinson said one serious obstacle has been overcome.

He said: "If we build soon water will be available from a Trousdale-Road connection at city rates."

"If we have to wait until after a Maple Bay Road scheme is approved we will have water, but at a higher rate."

Mr. Robinson said he has been assured there are two tenants available for every unit the congregation can build.

He said: "We have to form a non-profit society to administer the village and it will not close its mind to the possibility of providing single units."

Rents are set by CMHC and will likely be about $40 a month, in line with the existing Kiwanis Village in Duncan.

Mr. Robinson said: "I think it's a terrific project and shows the church's concern for others in the community."

"The Anglican Church is finally doing something for people other than themselves."

The project will mark the 100th anniversary of St. Peter's Church. It is the "baby" of C.A.P. Murison, chairman of a special centennial committee.

The committee examined three possibilities. One was improvement of the church buildings.

Mr. Robinson said this was turned down as not being absolutely necessary and in the class of doing something for themselves.

The committee also rejected the idea of a bursary for a theological student as inflation would deplete the value of $7,000 over the years.

The village was decided upon as something for the good of the whole community.

PORT ALBERNI — Alberni District Co-op is planning to build a $458,000 shopping centre here.

The centre is planned for the area bounded by Angus and Mrs. Streets, between Fourth and Fifth Avenues, South.

Shares in the new centre are being offered at $100 each.

COURTENAY — A weekly alcoholism clinic will be established here in November, a spokesman for the Alcoholism Foundation of B.C. said recently.

Group therapy sessions are planned every other Tuesday evening at the Courtenay Health Centre.

NANAIMO — A 14-year-old boy charged with delinquency by committing capital murder was ordered Friday to appear in adult court on a non-capital murder charge.

District magistrate Eric Winch ordered that the youth's identity be withheld until he appears in Assize Court here today.

The boy is charged in the bludgeoning death of Mrs. Elina Hartman, 82, whose body was found on the floor of her Chase River home last July 30.

Magistrate Winch at first refused to proceed with the hearing because the boy's Vancouver lawyer, Nick Mussallem, failed to appear.

After a delay Nanaimo lawyer Bill Currie was asked to appear on behalf of Mr. Mussallem.

PORT ALBERNI — The shooting deaths of Margaret Anderson and her husband Helge were ruled murder and suicide by a coroner's jury here. The couple died Sept. 15 in the front yard of their home.

SATURNA ISLAND — A new $30,233 lighthouse dwelling is to be built at East Point Light station.

The contract to complete the building by March, 1967, was awarded to K. C. Johnson Construction of Victoria.

The work will be under the supervision of the district marine agent for the Department of Transport in Victoria.

'Promote Love for Music By Playing an Instrument'

The best way to promote a love for music is for every member of a family to learn to play some musical instrument, says a well-known musician who is celebrating her 90th birthday today.

"This was quite a common practice in former days," said Mrs. Clara M. Waller, 10718 Madrona Drive. "There was more music in the home than there is today."

Her five children scattered on four continents, are in Victoria for the birthday celebrations to be held at the Deep Cove Chalet this evening.

They are John L. Waller, South Africa; Mrs. P. A. Voute Holland; Mrs. B. L. Cutler Australia; Mrs. Howard Watson, Saginaw, Quebec, and Mrs. F. Johnson, Madrona Drive.

Also attending the celebrations are two brothers and sisters, Mrs. W. B. Sterling, Madrona Drive; Mrs. John Flanders, Mount Joy; Col. R. O. Bull, Ardmore, and W. E. Bull, Winnipeg.

Mrs. Waller comes from an old Winnipeg family. She studied and taught music at the New England Conservatory in Boston and later in the Peace River and Vancouver. Her specialty was singing.

On her 90th birthday, she is still as active and alert as her children. She still plays the piano, takes an interest in international and national affairs and plays the stock market.

Curtis to Re-Submit Eaton's Application

Saanich council will be asked Monday night to reconsider its rejection of a warehouse and retail store for Eaton's in the municipality.

Reeve Hugh Curtis said today he was making this move under a section of the Municipal Act which allows the reeve to re-submit an item for reconsideration.

Earlier this month, council voted 5-to-4 on third reading of a bylaw to allow the new store in the 800 block Seymour behind Town and Country Shopping Centre. It needed six yes votes to pass.

The reeve said there were little or no objections from the public in the area and Dominion Construction had improved on an earlier proposal for the store.

This included modification to the planned building. At the same time Eaton's said the retail store would open simultaneously with the warehouse and not later as originally planned.

The reeve also said the reaction he has received since the store bid was rejected was "unanimously one of shock and disappointment."

He added: "We say on the one hand that we must attract new business to the municipality and when a very important application comes in we turn it down."

Councillors who objected to the store earlier said it would turn a good commercial area into a warehouse area and simply be a truck depot.

Reconsideration of the item has been placed on Monday's agenda.

The Sounding Board

By AUDREY ST.D. JOHNSON

Sidney had the honor of seeing the Victoria Symphony Orchestra off on its second quarter-century, Friday night. The program which will be repeated four times altogether, had its premiere in Sancha Hall.

Not being able to attend I have to rely on hearsay and the hearsay that has come my way is the kind that any symphony fan likes to hear said.

In general it seems it was an auspicious start to what promises to be the most brilliant season on record.

The opening series of concerts—in the Royal Theatre Sunday and Monday and the University of Victoria Gordon Head gymnasium Sunday night for Uvic students—departs from custom by presenting a guest soloist.

For many years the season's first concert pair has been all orchestral.

Otto-Werner Mueller, in choosing to open this season with a vocal soloist, could scarcely have found a more gifted young Canadian artist, nor one with a more intriguing personality.

Huguette Turangeau in rehearsal reveals a warm, velvety mezzo-soprano voice, but talking to her quickly makes one aware that her great artistic potential does not lie solely in her voice.

Mademoiselle Turangeau in intense, animated, vital. She has a high regard for individuality and is impatient with unimaginative bureaucracy.

Like the song, she knows where she's going and she heeds a straight line toward her goal, not permitting herself to be distracted or to relax her very high standards.

It took the Montreal-born artist a while to decide on a singing career. First of all she gained her BA and B.Ed from the University of Montreal and toyed with the idea of studying medicine.

She played the piano and had studied singing since the age of 16, but it was her mother who encouraged her in the end to go forward with her singing.

Huguette Turangeau says of her music—"I guess it's in the blood."

Several members of her family were musical, including an uncle who was an organist and wrote church music.

At the Conservatory of Music in Montreal, she studied voice with "a really wonderful teacher," Ruzena Hertling, and German opera and lieder with Otto-Werner Mueller, who is one of the people to whom she acknowledges a great debt.

"It is fantastic, how profoundly he knows music. And he has so much knowledge of the singer's problems and such consideration—it is wonderful to sing with him," she comments.

In fact, Mademoiselle Turangeau made her public debut under Mr. Mueller's baton in The Magic Flute.

In 1964 she sang Cherubino at the Stratford Festival and experienced another important influence—the stage direction of Jean Gasconne.

That was the year she decided suddenly that she would try for the Met Auditions, became a finalist, and before a packed Metropolitan Opera House in New York was declared the winner.

"I couldn't believe it when they called my name," she says. "Mother and my sister were there and Mother couldn't stop crying."

Opportunities followed, falling into her hands like ripe fruit. She was offered a contract by Sadler's Wells Opera Company but although she loves London she turned it down because its terms were vague as to what roles she would be doing.

"Signing a contract like that could be very bad for you," she explains. "I will never sign a contract where the works to be performed are unsuitable to my voice."

After her Met audition success, she performed under the batons of Richard Bonyngne and Zubin Mehta.

Then she was signed for the Metropolitan Opera National Company for their inaugural year, to sing the prize role of Carmen and Suzuki in Madam Butterfly.

During the 10 months' tour that criss-crossed the United States and Canada in 1964-65, the Canadian mezzo sang Carmen 25 times.

"Rudolf Bing attended all the performances in New York," she says, "so he has a good knowledge of what I can do."

Huguette Turangeau likes travelling but feels that 10 months at a stretch is rather too much of a good thing.

"I hate hotels," she says. "We are a very close family, my mother, my two sisters and I, and when you are used to a family life hotels are very lonely. I spent a fortune on long-distance calls during that tour."

She is not with the company this season because they were only doing operas with soprano roles.

"Do you find the career of a professional singer hard in other ways?" I asked.

"If you choose to sing you choose discipline," she replied. But if it hadn't been singing it might easily have been another and almost equally demanding art.

While in New York the young singer took acting lessons from Ludwig Donatt, an experienced drama coach, who told her: "If you ever give up singing you could be an actress any time."

Aside from reading, Mademoiselle Turangeau likes outdoor activities—swimming, tennis. Recently she has also taken up riding: "I'm scared but it's very nice."

She enjoys engagements like the present one with the Victoria Symphony and giving television and radio recitals which she has done frequently on CBC.

"What singer does not enjoy working with Maestro Mueller," she comments. "Just talk with any of them and your orchestra, it is so much better than one could possibly believe. They accompany beautifully. I am very much at ease with the orchestra."

Incidentally, among the new faces in the orchestra is the leading violinist, Simon Streetfield.

Mr. Streetfield, who replaces Kenneth Copeland (who has left the city), will commute from Vancouver for the rehearsals and concerts.

Formerly with the London Philharmonic, I am told by a top authority that he is undoubtedly one of the world's best viola players.

Concerning the music being performed this weekend by the symphony and its guest, the brilliant De Falla suite, El Amor Brujo, is a fascinating combination of hot Spanish rhythms and moving lyrical passages, some episodes bringing in the mezzo voice.

The Chausson work for mezzo and orchestra, Poeme de l'Amour, is an exquisite piece in romantic mood.

Beethoven's Coriolan Overture and Wagner's Meister-singer Prelude round out the program.

Live and in Color The Viet Nam War

CHICAGO (UPI)—American television fans may soon be able to settle back comfortably in their armchairs with a can of beer and watch live television coverage of a real war, probably in color.

Today it is technically feasible to provide live television coverage of a strike against the Communists in Viet Nam from a 7th Fleet carrier in the South China Sea," U.S. Navy Secretary Paul H. Nitze said Thursday.

In the same scenario, the American public can be eyewitnesses to the recovery of returning aircraft and see and hear navy pilots debrief their mission," he told the radio television news directors' association.

"It is not too far in the future that the so-called 'armchair strategist' will be able to watch a war actually being fought from his chair in the living-room," he said.

Nitze said such coverage depends on whether or not society is ready for it.

'Refugees Ready To Flee North'

By GEORGE TAYLOR

NEW YORK (AP) — The big trans-Atlantic luxury liners soon will sail southward toward sunny seas, the decks crowded with refugees fleeing from cold weather.

The fall and winter cruise season is a lifesaver for the passenger ship business.

No more do the liners seek to ply the highly competitive Atlantic run during the winter. Too many travellers prefer jets.

The 22 lines of the trans-Atlantic Passenger Steamship Conference carried 652,000 passengers across the Atlantic last year. The total was more than 1,000,000 in 1957.

Meantime, trans-Atlantic airline passenger traffic burgeoned to 4,200,000 last year from 707,000 in 1955.

The ships lost passengers because the jets were faster and air fares were lower. For about $300, a traveler can buy a 21-day airline excursion ticket round trip New York-London. It's a five-hour flight one way.

OFFER SPACE, LUXURY

Tourist-class rates aboard the Cunard line's Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth start at about $215 off-season for the five-day New York-to-Southampton voyage. First-class rates in the same period are about $445. Peak summer season rates are higher.

Ships counter airline speed and economy with spaciousness, service and luxury.

The big ships aren't abandoning the trans-Atlantic run. The superliners Queen Elizabeth, Queen Mary, United States and France and some slightly smaller ships maintain regular schedules between New York and Europe for much of the year. But they are turning more and more to the cruise business.

What of the future of the trans-Atlantic ship?

French Line president Edmond Lanier, with an eye on the forthcoming supersonic jets, says lower air fares will attract still more passengers from the ships. But, he says, "the increase in leisure time and the growth of tourism should enable us to find ample compensation in our cruises for any losses we might suffer in regular passenger service."

Cunard, which has been losing money, is building a $70,000,000 liner of 58,000 gross tons to go into service early in 1969. It's smaller than Cunard's $3,673-ton Queen Elizabeth and will be operated as a dual-purpose passenger ship and cruise liner.

The line's passenger ships lost $7,500,000 last year. Its cargo ships showed a profit of $2,520,000.

Begin World Voyage At Vancouver

Monthly round-the-world voyages from Vancouver will be offered by P & O-Orient Lines for the first four months of 1967 according to Kenneth L. Chamberlain, the line's Canadian manager.

The liner Arcadia will sail from Vancouver Jan. 22 and the Iberia on Feb. 13, both west-bound to Fiji, New Zealand, Australia, Hong Kong, Singapore, Malaya, India, Egypt, Italy, Portugal and Britain.

After a two-week stop over in the United Kingdom the homeward voyage begins with ports of call along the way in France, Florida, the Caribbean, Panama and Mexico. The round trip takes three months.

The P & O-Orient Lines has Canberra leave Vancouver March 6 and April 19 respectively on the reverse route, eastbound through the Panama.

P & O-Orient Lines has scheduled a total of eleven round-the-world sailings in 1967.

More than half a million persons are expected to make the tour of the movie studios at Universal City outside Los Angeles this year, according to the California Office of Tourism. Visiting the 400 acres of movie-making magic is a highlight on anybody's southern California itinerary.

IN, OUT OR UP IT'S NEWPORT

The dowager duchess of Devonshire is as elegantly attired as it has been since the Gilded Age. Newport never worries whether it is in, out, up or down. It is simply the place in summer — for the rich, the titled, the famous, the pedigreed, and the quietly fashionable, who are supremely sure of their place in the Old Society.

It is surprising, however, to note that Newport's reputation for insider stuffiness has slowly disintegrated. Over the past five years, a youthful, jicky spirit, largely sponsored by the young and athletic, has been coursing through the veins of the Old Lady.

Bikinis are now in evidence, surfers with their toes curled over the board's edge are shouting "Hang Ten," and parties are bringing out the latest in pop clothes. Newport is no longer the place of the lifted plinky. It swings!

It swings with such well-knowns as J. Gordon Douglas and John R. Drexel III; Walter S. Butekman, Minnie Cushing, Mrs. Peter Vought, Mrs. George H. Warren, Mrs. Blaffer Hudson, Mrs. Solon C. Kelley, the junior Wiley T. Buchanan, Count and Countess Anthony Szapary and the Samuel Van Alens.

The current issue of Venture magazine takes a look at the prominent visitors to Newport and gives advice to travellers on how to get the most from this "summer place."

The Colonial town, the modern town, busy shops, blazing night spots, towering churches and famous castles are all part of the "Newport bargain."

Record Order For New Cars
NEW YORK — A massive planned purchase of new vehicles — the largest ever projected by any business concern — was announced here today.

Hertz, largest renting and leasing organization, reported it plans record purchase of 90,000 new 1967 cars and trucks valued at approximately $314 million. It represents one of the largest, if not the largest order the automobile manufacturers receive.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE!
Through Newspaper Advertising

When we told a woman to fly to Bermuda, then spend 18 days sailing through the Caribbean to Vancouver with P&O, she said scowlingly,

"What do you take me for?"

When we said only $740 complete, she smiled.

You can take this unusual 28-day holiday with P&O on Dec. 9. The one price includes everything: your plane fares, 10 days in Bermuda, your accommodations on P&O's giant Chusan, and special sightseeing. Prices start at $740 tourist, $813 first class.

Sail through a jungle. After 10 days in Bermuda that includes special sightseeing, you board your P&O liner and head for the Caribbean, stopping first at Pt. Everglades and Nassau. Ahead are lazy days at sea in the sun on your way to the Panama Canal, where you'll take a fantastic waterway through the middle of the jungle! There will be stops at Cristobal and Balboa for shopping. Then, on to Acapulco, where you can see the famous cliff divers or watch a jai alai game. Your next stops will be

Los Angeles and San Francisco, where you can visit Disneyland and Fisherman's Wharf. Then Vancouver and home.

A crewman for every two passengers. Your P&O liner is one of the "biggest bloomin' ships sailing the seven seas." It is completely air-conditioned and carries a British crewman for every two passengers! The wine cellars store nearly 10,000 bottles of vintage wine. And the provisions include such delicacies as Scotch salmon and Strasbourg pâté.

Tip: book early. Reservations are already being accepted for the Dec. 9 departure. (Note: There is also a Jan. 20 departure for Nassau, where you join Arcadia for the voyage home.) Send coupon for free illustrated literature. Then see your travel agent.

Gain $572 At CNIB Party

It doesn't take a Ripley to believe it or not. Fall is here. The change of season was evident in the color theme and costumes at the coffee party, Friday morning, of the Women's Auxiliary of the Canadian Institute for the Blind. The affair was held in the CNIB office, Blanshard Street.

Yellow, white, red and orange predominated the colors of floral arrangements of daisies, snapdragons, gladioli, dahlias and chrysanthemums.

Autumn was even apparent in the tweed suits and chapeaux donned by guests, creating a fashion show in miniature.

Among the special guests attending the party were Mrs. George R. Pearkes and Mrs. A. W. Toone.

The focal point of the room was the lace-covered refreshment table with its centerpiece of pink and white carnations flanked by two silver candelabra and pink candles. Life members of the auxiliary, Mrs. R. B. Horton, Mrs. A. Gillespie, Mrs. D. H. King, Miss Ruth Jones, Mrs. T. M. Knox, Mrs. A. McFarlane, Mrs. W. W. Tymchuk and Mrs. W. J. Gamble presided.

Dainty sandwiches and a wide choice of cakes, cookies, brownies and breads kept guests returning to the refreshment table, completely neglecting chairs.

The home-baking stall, supervised by Mrs. F. W. Houghton-Beckwith, assisted by Mrs. A. E. Forder and Miss Helen Rattray, was completely bare of cakes, muffins and loaves of bread soon after the party began.

Mrs. D. N. Macmillan convened the affair. Greeting guests were Mrs. Gordon Jones, president of the auxiliary, and Mrs. T. C. Davis.

Mrs. R. H. B. Ker was in charge of floral arrangements. Handling receipts, which totalled $572, was Mrs. H. Morris.

SHOPPING GUIDE

'Shrinking Violets'— Don't Hide From This

By Penny Saver

"Shy hands" are almost a disease with some women. You've probably seen them... the hands that are always hiding away—in gloves, apron pockets, behind scarves, and even in the folds of a skirt. Sometimes they are casually tucked between the forearm and the side, or hidden underneath a table. They are very self-conscious hands. Reasons are unsightly hangnails, broken fingernails and scores of other things.

Now is the time to start bringing them out into the open. Convert their shyness into confidence with the products that I found.

One is a new type of cuticle remover. This is a pen-like device that removes cuticles in minutes. Press the tube, and the remover fluid comes out of a plastic tube with which you "erase" cuticles.

It's all done in one simple operation. There's no more messy cream and gouging instruments with this pen, priced at 98 cents. Use this hand-care device about once a week, or whenever necessary. It helps prevent hangnails and other things that turn lovely hands into "shrinking violets".

The broken fingernail is another cause of shy hands, especially when the hand has extra-long nails and one breaks just at the tip of the finger. Hands remain hermits until that one nail grows back to the same length as the others.

There is nothing worse when you have long fingernails than to have just one break. Nine long carefully filed and polished nails and one short broken one looks just dreadful.

Instant repairs on any finger are yours with the set of false fingernails I found. Simply trim these to the shape of your other nails. Glue them onto the base of the broken nail with the special adhesive. Use the same polish and you can't tell the difference. A special remover to unstuck the nail comes with each set. These sell for $1.50.

Don't let your hands shy away from the fall spotlight. Give Penny a call at 382-3131 and she'll tell you where she found "instant confidence".

MORETTI-FULTON VOWS EXCHANGED

An exquisite floor-length gown of tulle, fashioned with a full train of Chantilly lace, was worn by Katherine Sharon Fulton when she exchanged marriage vows and rings with Paul Raymond Moretti. The train, which extended from the empire waistline of the gown, was carried by Little Patti Stewart and Jo-Ann Moretti. The bodice of the sheath gown was styled with a scalloped neckline and sleeves ending in ruffled points. Lace bordered the bodice and the neckline, which were accented with a headpiece of fabric petals, started with pearls. She carried white gardenias, yellow carnations, stephanotis and ivy in her bouquet.

St. John's Anglican Church was decorated with arrangements of yellow and white chrysanthemums when Canon Graham Baker heard vows uniting the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Fulton, 2815 Murray Drive, and the son of Mrs. E. Moretti, 1946 Bouchier Street. Mr. Fulton gave his daughter in marriage.

"O Perfect Love" was sung by Miss Wendy Cox during the signing of the register, accompanied by organist Donald Woodworth.

Green velvet trimmed the empire-line gowns of yellow tulle worn by matron of honor Mrs. Sandy Fulton and bridesmaids, the Misses Colleen and Andrea Fulton, Donna Chestnut and Veronica Currie. Their picture hats were of green tulle and they carried bouquets of white and orange carnations and ivy.

Flower girl Barbara Moretti wore a dress of green velvet, accented with yellow trim. She wore a green and yellow ribbon in her hair and carried a small basket of yellow and white carnations.

The train-bearers were in yellow tulle, trimmed with green velvet, and they wore yellow bows with tulle veils on one in their hair. Their colonial bouquets of yellow carnations and white ribbons were attached to the train of the bride's gown. Best man was Wes Adams and Ed Hastings, Al Scherr, Rick MacLeod and Bruce Kirkham were ushers. The rings were carried on a green velvet cushion, accented with gold tassels, by Master Kenny Moretti.

Hon. Wesley Black proposed the toast to the bride at the reception which followed in the

Mary Sylvia Reinhard Married Today

Following a honeymoon trip to San Francisco, Calif., newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. John Boutiller will make their home in North Vancouver.

The bride is the former Mary Sylvia Reinhard, daughter of Mrs. Walter Reinhard, 3341 Woodburn Avenue, and the groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. R. Boutiller, 234 Government Street.

Arrangements of white chrysanthemums decorated St. John's United Church, this afternoon, for the service at which Rev. A. G. MacLeod officiated. During the ceremony, organist Mrs. Vera Barclay played "Praise My Soul, the King of Heaven." She also accompanied John Dunbar who sang "The Lord's Prayer" at the beginning of the service, and "The Twenty-Third Psalm" during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her brother, Kenneth Reinhard, the attractive bride wore a dainty sheath gown of white matelasse, which she topped with an empress coat on train. It featured sleeves to the wrist, accented with tiny bridal buttons. Her veil of silk illusion net misted softly from a tiara of pearls. In her cascade bouquet were gardenias, stephanotis, ivy and edelweiss, flown from Switzerland for the wedding.

GOWNS OF GREEN

Deep moss green silk velvet formed the empire-line gowns chosen by the bride's attendants. The gowns were fashioned with slim skirts and short puffed sleeves, and they were accented with matching floral headpieces. White feathered chrysanthemums and ivy were in their cascade bouquets.

Mrs. Clare Anderson was matron of honor for her sister and bridesmaids were the Misses Leigh Forrest and Sandra Dale.

New Test May Predict Sex Prior to Birth

BOSTON (AP)—A team of physicians report they have correctly predicted the sex of babies prior to birth 39 consecutive times using a new test.

But the doctors warn that the test is not meant to "satisfy the curiosity" of expectant parents.

The new test, developed at the Albany, N.Y., Medical College, is based on cells that are taken from the amniotic fluid surrounding the unborn child in the womb by needle.

A series of chemical tests is then made on the cells to find a tell-tale female chromosome.

Each female cell contains a pair of X-chromosomes. Males have an X-Y pair.

In the female cell, one of the chromosomes is found, by staining, lightly coiled at the side of the cell's nucleus.

When it is found, the prediction is "girl," without it, "boy."

- CYST IN THE SOIL (Cross Section)

* Magnified 18 Times

An extensive search and eradication program for this pest is in progress. Eradication takes time—the Golden Nematode eggs may remain alive in the soil for over 20 years. To limit the spread of this pest a Federal-Provincial quarantine is in effect in parts of Lower Vancouver Island.

The quarantine bans the movement from the area of soil, plants or plant parts, containers and machinery or equipment with soil attached, unless approved by an Officer of the Plant Protection Division.

The quarantined land districts are North Saanich, South Saanich, Lake, Victoria, Esquimalt, Metehosin, Goldstream, Highland, Malahat, Otter and Sooke.

TIPS FOR HOME GARDEN

The Glory of Falling Leaves

By JACK BEASTALL.
The fall season has a different meaning for each of us. To some it is the ending of something beautiful; to others it is just a transition from one phase to another of living things.

To the chemist it represents an accomplishment by nature of something quite difficult to understand and impossible to duplicate in the laboratory.

To the food economist it is a waste of enough saccharine substance to sweeten all the coffee in the world. To the artist it is a beauty he strives to capture and hold forever on canvas.

To the home gardener the fall season may be a nuisance, with falling leaves clogging his lily pool, smothering his precious alpine plants, and betoken much raking and phasing in the weeks ahead.

To the botanist it is the breaking down of chlorophyll (the coloring matter that makes leaves appear green), the formation of xanthophyll which is affected by the acidity of the cell sap and the formation of anthocyanin. And so the glory of the fall, just like the glory of our plants and flowers, is translated into gold, practical chemistry.

This happens frequently when we study the human body, animals, birds, insects, plants, and even the soil itself — we end up finding the explanation in chemistry.

STRONG LIGHT
To explain the beauty of fall color we start with the green leaf and its ability to turn carbon-dioxide from the air and water from the soil, into sugars and starches (carbohydrates) in the presence of strong light or sunshine. As the summer ends, the making of starch declines and the plant commences to stock its food cupboards with supplies in a form that will store over winter and be available in spring to convert into swelling buds and unfolding leaves.

There are many color pigments present in all leaves but they are usually hidden from view by the green of chlorophyll. The breaking down of the chlorophyll and the withdrawal of food for storage, permits the other pigments to be seen.

In addition to chlorophyll, the leaves contain carotenoids which are yellow and orange, while leaves which are partly or completely red or pink contain red pigments which, in the case of red-leaved maples and the copper-beech, make yellow and green pigments.

Anthocyanin pigments are involved in developing the red shades and weather and other factors seem to play a part. But experiments to prove this are difficult to perform because the pigments are made in so short a time.

When leaves are studied, a high sugar content is noticeable in the fall. It is an early product of the combination of water and carbon-dioxide and in the fall the light is still strong enough for the manufacturing to continue. But the lower temperatures reduce

WEEK'S WORK

Summer bedding annuals should now be pulled up and added to the compost heap, making space for biennial planting and the spring blooming bulbs.

Late blooming chrysanthemums should be checked for firm stalks and secure ties to withstand rain and gales.

Decide on planting peonies. Soil needs to be deeply prepared for the large storage roots. A place in full sun is best.

Weather may change at any time — get as much planting of herbaceous material done as possible, it will root readily in warm damp soil.

Plants for the rock garden grown in small containers can be planted now. Give each one the conditions it needs.

In the bush fruit garden, fork over the ground lightly where it has been tramped during picking. Raspberry canes should be only surface weeded, for their roots are shallow.

Fruit trees will be improved by having a two-inch-deep layer of rotted compost spread over their root areas.

the movement of the sugars so that an abundance collects in the leaves. The presence of sugars adds to the intensity of fall colors, so that bright fall weather and little rainfall is necessary to the development of the best autumn coloration.

The natural ripening of leaves takes place at the time of year when the days are bright and the nights are frosty and we may be entirely mistaken in attributing the gray colors of fall to the action of frost.

The ripening will take place regardless of the weather but the two phenomena may not belong together as cause and effect.

Colors are less vivid in places where the atmosphere is moist. England, and our own Pacific Coast, have nothing to compare with the glory of fall colors in Eastern Canada and Northeastern United States. Cold rains quickly wash the color from the landscape and a sharp freeze will cut the leaves from the trees before they are ripe and no color appears as they lie in a mushy state on the soil.

INSIDE CITY HALL

A Powerful Voice

By JIM HUME

As a neutral observer at the Union of British Columbia Municipalities convention in Penticton last week I feel compelled to agree with the stand taken earlier this week by delegates from Victoria.

Reeve Hugh Curtis of Saanich, who sometimes claims that the city is a little too sensitive to criticism, is perhaps showing that same sensitivity himself when he staunchly defends the "stimulating discussion" which must have taken place each time I left the convention hall to file a story.

As a member of the executive and therefore a shaper of resolutions it can be understood why he would defend his own. But why make a stand on such an untenable issue?

The record of past UBCM conventions—and the imaginary power the organization packs—is set down dimly in the annual report of the executive secretary.

In that document, the most oft-repeated phrases are "the minister refused," "the minister could not agree," "the government showed little enthusiasm."

Searching through the 83 resolutions shaped and approved by the 1965 convention we could only find five recommendations that were accepted by the department of municipal affairs. There is a scattering of "still under study"—that wonderful phrase with which politicians dispatch unwanted issues into limbo. But for the most part the record is a dreary repetition of failure.

The UBCM is obviously not as effective as Reeve Curtis thinks.

The record says so quite clearly and emphatically.

A couple of days ago Mayor William Rathie of Vancouver stated publicly that Minister of Municipal Affairs Dan Campbell doesn't exactly hold the UBCM in awesome respect.

It's a statement with which we have to agree.

But then why should a minister hold in respect an organization which deluges his department with between 80 and 100 recommendations—many of them of petty nature—each year?

The criticism of the Victoria delegates was never intended to be "let's end the UBCM." It was intended to be, and I think they made this clear, a demand for a streamlining of a convention sadly in need of such a program.

What they were saying was that the executive should take a tougher approach to resolutions, consolidate as many as possible, winkle out others not deserving of full convention study and then have, if I may use the quote, "vigorous and stimulating debate" on the survivors.

Auto Theft
Nets Man
Three Years

A city man who earlier pleaded guilty to two counts of auto theft was sentenced to three years in penitentiary Friday.

Donald Champion, 272 Ontario Street, was arrested near Durrance Lake Sept. 3, where police found one of the cars, a $4,600 model, stripped of its parts. Champion admitted taking it from the Executive House parking lot.

The accused admitted stealing the other car from a downtown parking lot Aug. 15 and abandoning it in dense bush off Glenderning Road after he had taken the auto's four wheels for his own car.

Champion was on parole from a 2½-year sentence for 22 counts of possessing stolen goods at the time of the auto thefts.

He said before sentence Friday he intended seeking psychiatric help while in prison.

Magistrate Ostler said he felt intense pity for both Champion and his family but the accused had shown he was still at a stage where he required supervision.

He was sentenced to three-year concurrent terms on each count.

Inmate Died From Stroke;
Wilkinson Staff Praised

A vagrant found dead in his cell at Wilkinson Road provincial jail Saturday night died of natural causes, a coroner's jury ruled Friday nights.

Aubrey Andrews, 48-year-old laborer without a fixed address, suffered a fatal stroke, Dr. Ross McNeely, pathologist at Royal Jubilee Hospital told the inquest a t McCall Brothers Funeral Chapel.

An autopsy showed Andrews was in "fairly good physical shape. There were no signs of violence, of foul play," said the doctor.

In its verdict, the six-man jury had words of praise for the jail staff on the care they gave the dead man after he was booked in for a 30-day term on a vagrancy conviction the day before he died.

ALL THEY COULD

"They did all they could," said the jury foreman.

One recommendation was added to the verdict. The jury suggested prisoners transferred from one institution to another who are not in good health should be accompanied by a doctor's certificate detailing their physical condition.

This might prevent a prisoner in poor health from getting the wrong medical treatment sometime in the future.

Security officers testifying at the inquest said Andrews was "shaky" and unsteady when he arrived at the jail, displaying symptoms common to "withdrawal from alcohol."

The prisoner had been permitted to stay in bed Saturday and guards checking him every half hour had found him asleep, dozing or sitting on his cell bunk.

SHAKES

He had not asked to see a doctor but had been given pills for "the shakes" when he asked for them. He wanted nothing to eat but had drunk two glasses of milk for supper a few hours before he died.

Andrews had been asleep when checked by his guard at 9:10 p.m. Saturday night. When cell doors were being locked 25 minutes later, security officers noticed he was no longer breathing. He was given inhalator treatment for 25 minutes but did not respond.

Victoria police arrested Andrews 10 days ago when they found him wandering on Pandora early in the morning.

In his pockets were two bottles of bay rum, $15.50 cash, a tooth brush and his false teeth.

He was shaking noticeably and complained of being ill when he appeared in court.

NEMATODE DILEMMA

Growers Lash Quarantine

Central Saanich growers in the McHugh Valley will hold a meeting to protest government plant quarantine regulations imposed on the potato growing area.

FUND-RAISING for Community Chest is United Appeal division co-chairman Commodore R. M. Battles, RCN, commander of HMC Dockyard, giving his time to help federal civil servants contribute to the chest's 21 member agencies.

'Urgent Need' For Centres In Outer Area

Three levels of government were today asked to help provide Silver Threads centres in outlying districts of Victoria. The new centres are needed because of overcrowding at the main centre at 4 Centennial Square.

"Decentralization is the only answer," says the Silver Threads executive committee in a brief to the federal and B.C. governments and the municipal governments of Greater Victoria.

The committee, headed by Owen Karn, president, points out that membership in the centre has grown from 1,600 in September of 1965 to more than 4,400.

It suggests the establishment of auxiliary centres offering the same kind of services as at Centennial Square.

CONCERTS, DANCES

These include concerts, dances, card games, discussion groups, library facilities, arts and handicraft classes.

The committee urges that church and community halls be used as district centres under administration of the main centre.

IT PROPOSES:

• That municipal governments assume the cost of maintaining and servicing district centres.

• That the B.C. government contribute annually to administrative and program costs.

• That the federal government match provincial contributions on an annual basis.

• That Victoria Community Chest continue to participate financially, as junior partner, in the cost of Silver Threads services.

The B.C. government already makes an outright grant of one-third of the cost of acquiring or constructing Silver Threads facilities.

DAY CENTRES

But, says the brief, the need for day centres and the services they provide are fast outstripping available dollars.

"Financial assistance from the three levels of government is required."

"Last winter many dozens of senior citizens had to be turned away for lack of accommodation," says Mrs. Catherine Horne, executive director.

Ask The Times

Q. What is the Indian way to smoke salmon? B.K.

A. One long-folled smoking procedure is to take a salmon, split it down the back, rub with coarse salt and allow to stand overnight. Then rinse free of salt and spread over a wooden board for three or four days. When almost smoked put above wild cherry wood fire which glazes the fish. It is then ready to slice and eat.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along with the Times, addressed to "Ask The Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve problems or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or securities. These should be submitted to a dealer.

ARTHUR MAYSE ON VACATION

SHE ALSO SINGS—But Friday afternoon pretty Huguette Turangeau, a young mezzo-soprano from Montreal, decided to just bask in the sun in Centennial Square. Local concert-goers will have an opportunity to hear her Sunday afternoon and Monday evening when she appears with the Victoria Symphony under the direction of Otto-Werner Mueller. She will sing the works of composers Chausson and de Falla.

Hey! Show a Leg ... Wrenettes Will!

As the old navy saying goes: "Show a leg there." In the modern day navy it's likely to get far better results than the old salts ever dreamed of.

Thanks to a new ruling Friday, the show will include a leg, a knee and just a teeny-weeny bit of thigh.

The rule affects Navy League Wrenettes—14 to 18-year-old girls—who in the past have worn below-the-knee skirts as part of their uniform.

As a result of a suggestion by Pat Dufour, Victoria Times women's editor, the girls will wear culottes in future—above-the-knee pants styled to look like a skirt.

Speaking at the navy league's national council in Winnipeg, Mrs. Dufour, who heads the national Wrenette program, said:

"Have you ever tried to pull oars or shoot in a prone position on a firing range in a tight skirt?"

"Believe me, you run the risk of ending up looking like Irma La Douce."

The newly approved uniform will be completed with a white shirt, black tie, navy jacket and seaman's cap.

The national council also decided to hold a national Wrenette sailing regatta in Victoria next year.

ELECTED first vice-president of the Navy League of Canada Friday was Dennis W. Brown of Victoria. His election took place at the 71st annual meeting in Winnipeg. Mr. Brown is on the staff of Greater Victoria School Board.

Drivers Appealing 3-Month Sentences

Two jail sentences handed down by Magistrate J. A. Byers this week to drivers involved in traffic fatalities are being appealed.

Samuel Donald Semple, 34, of 66 View Royal was sentenced to three months in jail Friday after being convicted of dangerous driving in a head-on collision on the Old Island Highway Aug. 20.

Murdo Gillies, 56, of 2831 Murray Drive, the other driver in the crash was dead on arrival at hospital.

Semple's counsel, Jack Gatehouse, said he was appealing both the conviction and sentence. Semple was released on $500 bail today pending hearing of the appeal by a higher court.

Morrison's lawyer, Rodney Taylor, said he too was appealing both the conviction and sentence.

Cost of Hay Increasing, Hard To Get

The Victoria SPCA has a warning for gentleman farmers. To forestall perennial winter complaints about the poor condition of livestock, the society advises that hay this year is going to be both expensive and hard to come by.

"Those with one or two head of cattle, a calf or perhaps a riding horse might find the price of hay this January something of a shock," said a society spokesman today.

"Early rains this year hurt the first hay crop."

"Do it now," he said. "Buy hay in larger lots than usual—in company with other animal owners if more convenient."

CRANKING UP 1926 Model T is Howard Tomlin of Maynard and Sons, auctioneers. Old Stalwart is used on appraisal trips and represents the company's contribution to Centennial year. Found near Elk Lake, "Maria" has 20,500 miles on the clock and is in beautiful condition.

Overtime Act To Be Enforced

Province Serious Peterson Warns

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Labor Reporter

The provincial government will back up its call for an end to overtime, Labor Minister Leslie Peterson said today.

"If need be, the mechanics are there and they will be enforced, if necessary," he said.

One of the mechanics is a fine not exceeding $500 for any employer or employee who violates any provision of the Hours of Work Act or its regulations.

Earlier, Premier Bennett announced that any difficulties in eliminating overtime will result in new legislation "banning overtime in B.C." at the next session of the legislature in January.

But at the present time the framework of existing legislation would make enforcement difficult.

Mr. Peterson was asked in an interview how the law could be enforced on a province-wide basis.

"There is provision for prosecution for failure to comply with the act," he replied. "But I would not want to extend that comment."

He also asked employers without permits to prevent the necessity for such permits.

He admitted that elimination of overtime may necessitate re-arrangement of working schedules "perhaps at considerable inconvenience, even sacrifice."

But in view of economic prospects, "the government believes that it is desirable . . . to maintain the principle of the eight-hour day and the 44-hour week provided in the Hours of Work Act."

In an interview, he added that

Rules in Hours of Work Act

Working hours and overtime for most B.C. workers are set down in the Hours of Work Act and a string of regulations.

The law does not apply to workers falling under federal jurisdiction, such as railway workers and longshoremen.

Exactly how each company and employee fits into the law depends on the company and individual because of various exemptions.

Basically, the act states that working hours shall not exceed eight in one day and 44 in one week.

Emergencies Exempt From Act

Section 6 of the act allows the maximum to be exceeded "in case of accident, or in case of urgent work to be done to machinery or plant, or in case of force majeure but only so far as may be necessary to avoid serious interference with the ordinary working of the undertaking."

All employers must keep a correct record of hours worked each day by employees and the Board of Industrial Relations has power to examine this record.

Section 12 of the act allows the board to exempt any industrial undertaking "in whole or in part" from the act.

And the penalty for anyone breaking the hours of work limitations is a fine not exceeding $500.

FOR THANKSGIVING

'Better Looking' Birds Cost Less

Thanksgiving turkeys, despite significant rises in the cost of living, are selling from four to six cents less than last year's prices.

And to distributors and retailers, this year's birds are "better-looking."

Chain store prices for turkeys last year were 55 cents for those under 16 pounds and 51 cents for those over.

"This year," said a Woodward's poultry man, "they're going for 49 cents and 47 cents. 'We'll follow suit,'" said his Safeway counterpart.

"They're better looking birds this year," said a spokesman for Wright's of Oak Bay. His firm, he said, was asking up to 73 cents a pound for small fresh birds, 59 cents for big toms.

'PLUMPER' Happy Valley Poultry, one of the few local suppliers, says the birds are "plumper."

"But we're having trouble rounding up enough Island turkeys."

He gets most of his from the mainland to sell to local grocers.

"Most local turkey ranchers wait for Christmas."

"People eat 10 times the turkeys then. There's no comparison."

Third Time Lucky?

Saanich has written to Highway Minister F. A. Gagliardi for the third time in two months asking him to declare McKenzie Avenue a secondary highway.

The municipality has acquired land along the road between Patricia Bay Highway and Ruby Road to widen and construct McKenzie to four lanes. Ratepayers approved borrowing of nearly $1 million for the work last December.

If the road was declared a secondary highway, it would then be eligible for provincial construction and maintenance grants.

The third letter, sent this week by Reeve Hugh Curtis, points out the minister was sent two earlier letters since Aug. 1.

If the road cannot be designated as a secondary highway, the reeve asked Mr. Gagliardi if he can give his department's views on the subject.

South Island May Escape Flu Epidemic

Metropolitan Health Board spokesmen today expressed doubt that a flu epidemic forecast for the West Coast this winter would seriously spread to the Island.

The outbreak was predicted by the U.S. drug consultant firm which correctly pegged this spring's flu epidemic. This winter's attack should be as severe as the earlier epidemic the firm said.

ESCAPED LAST ONE Health board spokesmen pointed out the Island escaped the brunt of the earlier epidemic and suggested the same thing might happen again. "It's a very tricky business," a spokesman said. He noted that it is "very difficult" to make a forecast for a specific area such as Vancouver Island.

A weak infection is fairly prevalent in the area, he said. It is marked by headaches and pains in the arms and legs. But this is likely unrelated to the forecast epidemic.

If the flu bug is on its way it hasn't yet reached the schools. Attendance figures have not dropped in the Greater Victoria area.

He hopes to join the navy upon graduation, or even before if he can get an ROTP scholarship.

The trophy he will receive as the country's top sea cadet will join a battery of impressive awards on his mantel.

The 110-member Rainbow corps draws its members from the Greater Victoria area. Commanded by Lt. D. D. Casey the corps has in the past received recognition for its outstanding performance.

A number of other awards were also announced at the Navy League conference. PO Hugh Munro, a member of the Husky corps in Flin Flon, Manitoba, was chosen runner-up cadet.

The St. Norbert corps in Cap Chat, Quebec, was selected as the top corps among those with fewer than 100 cadets.

Flin Flon's Husky corps won the national rifle competition and the Royal Sovereign corps in Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., won the international rifle contest.

CHAMBER ANSWERS THEM ALL

Then There Are Silly Ones

By GLEN ALLEN
Boy, does the Chamber of Commerce get some funny ones!

Following a season's sound, airy and silly questions the city's chamber lets us home-bound folks in on some of the more exotic services provided visitors and would-be visitors.

They include:

• A reply to a query about a racing pigeon that landed in California bearing a Victoria numbered leg band. (Investigation revealed the pigeon with that tag had never left home).

• Reconnaissance for a man from Butte, Idaho, to find a bar he had been in "situated in the front of the building with the supper club down the hall and behind the bar. Waitresses wore abbreviated costume."

• Advice for a Hamilton, Ontario woman who asked for a check on local drug stores to determine whether there was a cigarette beneficial to arthritis sufferers.

• Advice to an Alberta woman that she could indeed find crumpled rings in Victoria.

• Purchase of slides of Victoria for a Lincoln, Illinois, man whose pictures taken here didn't turn out.

And on the credit side of a pretty rocky ledger, a blessing by the minister of the First Presbyterian Church of a North Carolina town, for services rendered.
